

Newsflash: Half of what college students

Saturday, 17 March 2007

Half of what college technology students learn today will be outdated just two years from now, before they graduate from a four-year degree program. This is due to the amount of new technology information doubling every two years.